SACRED HEART ACADEMY.

The Catholics of the diocese of Salt Lake feel proud of the great and good work done in the Sacred Heart Academy of Ogden. Its graduates are to be found in every state west of the Missouri river. Its successful work has won for it the confidence of the entire west. In addition to the religious and practical education imparted, the pupils, boarding and day pupils find all the comforts of home in this beautiful building, located near the base of the picturesque Wasatch range of mountains. The results obtained by the children in their training and preparing for the battle of life have been always the measure of their great success and have made the Sacred Heart Academy famous in the west.

The accompanying list shows the graduates of the academy, which is a counterpart of the Interior League. To all who require a real home and best educational facilities for their children, the Sacred Heart Academy can be highly recommended.

"FAKE" PRIESTS AT PARK.

Bishop Scamman Thinks Solicitors at Park City Are Impostors.

The two alleged "fake priests" who have been soliciting alms for the poor in the various mining camps are now in Park City, according to latest reports.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Scamman of the Salt Lake diocese says that no one may solicit contributions for such a purpose without a written permission from him. As he has issued no such permits to any two priests, he believes the men are impostors, who, representing themselves as "humble clerics," are imposing on charitable people.

Bishop Scamman is incensed at the reported soliciting of the two men and is doing everything in his power to warn the outside community.

"BEN HUR."

The Representative American Drama of the Age.

Among Americans who are inspired by patriotic sentiment there cannot fail to be a strong realization that the most important play in the history of the stage world is the work of an American. That play is "Ben-Hur"; the author, General Lew Wallace. Since its original production in Salt Lake City, the closing year of the last century, it has been produced in many foreign countries and languages, and all have acknowledged its superiority. The attention paid it by representative personages of the world, from the pope of Rome to the king of England and the president of the United States, has worked a healthy influence among all classes, and today to attend a performance of "Ben-Hur" is considered a part of the education of the rising generation.

Usually one approaches a play made on a really powerful level with misgivings and regrets, but with "Ben-Hur" this is different; herein lies one of its great charms. The incident of the falling title, which led to the discovery of the story of Ben-Hur and the scattering of its members, the description of the price of that house, enslaved and chained to the oar of a Roman galley; the chariot race; the struggle of loyalty which befell the imprisoned mother and daughter and doomed them to lifelong isolation, and their final healing by a divine hand; these are events which stand paramount in the memory after reading General Wallace's book. Each and all of the scenes depicting these events have been embodied in the play and sung with a dramatic and magnificent force that makes "Ben-Hur" the most important spectacle in the history of the stage world.

The public of this vicinity will have an opportunity to witness "Ben-Hur" at the Salt Lake theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah, Christmas week. It is to be enacted for six nights, starting Dec. 23. Matinees are to be given on Christmas day, Wednesday and Saturday. When "Ben-Hur" was presented in Salt Lake two years ago people from all parts of Utah, Idaho, Colorado, Montana and California came to witness it and, judging by the interest manifested in the forthcoming engagement, the same thing will occur right over again.
